NATIONAL INCIDENT MANAGEMENT SYSTEM (NIMS)

In 2003, the Homeland Security Presidential Directive #5 (HSPD-5) established the National Incident Management System (NIMS) and mandated minimum training for all persons with roles and responsibilities during an emergency incident. NIMS serves to enhance the ability to manage incidents by establishing a single, standardized and comprehensive incident management system. Developed from the best practices of incident management, this management system is designed to cover the preparation for, response to and recovery from any incident, event or emergency, regardless of the size, nature, duration, location, scope or complexity.

Cornell University utilizes the National Institute Management System (NIMS). The implementation of this system allows University personnel interoperability at all levels, and with external agencies and government at a local, state and federal level, efficiently and effectively using established concepts, principles, terminology and technologies. These include multi-agency coordination, unified command, training identification along with the management of resources and the dissemination of information.

The following table has been developed to identify required training for key University personnel within the Cornell University Emergency Management Program. Questions regarding this document and the guidance for training should be directed to the Emergency Manager at 607-255-8200 or email to askehs@cornell.edu.
